

Kataleifos Interview Question 13

Kataleifos:

In a month we will start, a little before Christmas. It is a very interesting play. It was performed in America by a theater troupe from Canada. The play is called "Ritter, Dene, Voss," and it is by a famous Austrian writer, Thomas Bernhard. We are currently rehearsing the play. It is a play with three siblings; the protagonist, whom I play, has many characteristics of Ludwig Wittgenstein, the great philosopher, and Paul Wittgenstein, his nephew. This is a very particular role because the character [I play] has just come out of psychiatric hospital and is somewhere between absolute logic and absolute madness. For this reason you understand that the role is very difficult.
